From the tractor

Commissioner

As any farmer today knows, you have to maintain tight control of your input costs if you want to maximize the return on your investment and make a profit at the end of the season.

Everywhere you turn, prices are going up. Fertilizer prices have skyrocketed, fuel costs are near records, and these two costs have figured into the rising prices of food.

These concerns are just part of the reason why the work of the state's 18 research stations is so critical to farmers. The N.C. Department of Agriculture and Consumer Services partners with N.C. State University and N.C. A&T State University on the research stations. Under the partnership, university researchers develop and conduct field research, while NCDA&CS staff manage the properties, prepare the lands and tend to research plots per the orders of researchers.

The research conducted on these stations, and the results provide a tried and tested foundation for new production techniques that can lead to savings for growers. And, hopefully, these kinds of savings can help keep food prices down, too.

Our state's research stations continue to host agricultural field days, commodity-specific workshops and ag awareness days, providing farmers with an opportunity to see new practices at work and to ask researchers questions that relate to their own growing situation.

In my opinion, and experience, this kind of proven and tested advice is priceless.

Because our stations are situated in different climates

Advance State Fair ride, concert and admission tickets on sale now

Tickets for the 2008 N.C. State Fair are on sale now at www.nc-statefair.org, including admission, ride, grandstand and Dorton Arena entertainment tickets.

"We are extending our ticket sales this year to give people more time to make purchases," said Wesley Wyatt, State Fair manager. "While we feel the State Fair provides one of the best entertainment values in the state, we understand that wallets are stretched a little more than usual now. By offering early ticket sales, families can make plans and purchases throughout the next three months if necessary."

Tickets for all Dorton Arena shows can only be purchased in advance online, so concertgoers should shop early for the best seats.

The concert lineup is:

Thursday, Oct. 16: Josh Turner - $22

Friday, Oct. 17: Jason Aldean - $15

Saturday, Oct. 18: Toby Mac - $10

Sunday, Oct. 19: Lady Antebellum and Heidi Newfield - $8

Monday, Oct. 20: Bobby Flay - $22

Tuesday, Oct. 21: Bucky Covington - $5

Wednesday, Oct. 22: TBA

Thursday, Oct. 23: Mario - $16.50

Friday, Oct. 24: Skillet and Leeland - $8

Saturday, Oct. 25: Joe Nichols - $11.50

Sunday, Oct. 26: Montgomery Gentry - $31.50

Buying advance tickets will save $2 per adult admission ticket and $8 per ride sheet. Advance admission tickets will cost $5 for adults and $1 for children ages 6-12. Adult admission tickets for groups of 40 or more will cost $4.75. A coupon that can be redeemed at the Fair for a sheet of 18 ride tickets will cost $10 in advance.

Visa and MasterCard payments are accepted online for all tickets.

Top country acts to headline celebration of N.C. agriculture at food and music festival Sept. 13

Country artists Blake Shelton, Tracy Byrd, Jake Owen and Granite Falls native Eric Church will join three additional country and Southern rock artists at the Diet Pepsi "Got to Be NC Ag Jam" presented by Food Lion on Sept. 13 at the Time Warner Cable Music Pavilion at Walnut Creek.

Tickets for the family-friendly food and music festival, which will feature N.C. food products from local growers and producers, are on sale now through all Ticketmaster outlets and online at www.ticketmaster.com. Tickets will be $15 for lawn seating, $20 for reserved seating and $25 for Gold Circle seating.

"Between the delicious local products and some great country music, it's going to be a real celebration of our agricultural production," said Agriculture Commissioner Steve Troxler. "I am so excited to show off N.C. agriculture and give people a chance to taste and buy some of the freshest local products North Carolina has to offer."

The festival will kick off at noon and last until 11 p.m. Gates open at 11 a.m. Seven music acts will perform throughout the day-long event:

- Blackberry Smoke, 12:30 - 1:30 p.m.
- Jamey Johnson, 2-3 p.m.
- Heartland, 3:30-4:30 p.m.
- Jake Owen, 5-6 p.m.
- Eric Church, 6:30-7:30 p.m.
- Tracy Byrd, 8-9:15 p.m.
- Blake Shelton, 9:45-11 p.m.

The "Got to Be NC Ag Jam" is sponsored entirely by N.C. companies and organizations, including Diet Pepsi, Food Lion, Brightleaf Hotdogs, Deans Farm Market, Q-Shack Restaurant, N.C. Egg Farmers and Got to Be NC Agriculture.

For additional details on the festival, visit www.NCAgJam.com.

Advance sales

Online sales are print-at-home tickets. Each ticket purchased online will be assessed a convenience fee, which ranges from 5 to 15 percent.
Beginning Oct. 2 until Oct. 16, admission and ride tickets will be available for walk-up purchase at the N.C. State Fairgrounds, the Agriculture Building in downtown Raleigh, the State Farmers Market, Triangle Town Center in Raleigh, Burlington Square Mall in Burlington, Wilson Mall in Wilson, Northgate Mall in Durham, The Streets at Southpoint in Durham and Four Seasons Town Centre in Greensboro. All locations will accept cash, debit and credit cards except Wilson Mall, which will accept cash only. The convenience fee does not apply at walk-up locations.

For more, go to www.nc-statefair.org. The 2008 State Fair will be held Oct. 16-26.

N.C. prohibits sale of cogongrass

The N.C. Department of Agriculture and Consumer Services’ Plant Industry Division is prohibiting the propagation, nursery cultivation, sale and distribution of cogongrass, along with all cultivars, including Red Baron or Japanese blood grass.

“The policy change is being made to prevent further introduction and secondary spread of cogongrass in North Carolina,” said Agriculture Commissioner Steve Troxler. “Widespread infestations of Cogongrass displace native vegetation and frequently serve as a fuel source for fires, creating concerns for safety and property loss.”

Cogongrass, a federally and state-listed noxious weed, has been detected in Texas, Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama, Georgia, Florida and South Carolina, where it is a major concern. Most recently, it was found in Tennessee. The perennial is a tall, narrow grass with a reddish tint.

Prior to this policy change, the propagation, sale and distribution of cultivars had been permitted by NCDA&CS. This change will not directly affect established plantings; however, homeowners and other landowners are encouraged to monitor existing plantings for escaped plants or plants that show signs of invasiveness.

Under the new policy, all permits for the interstate movement of cogongrass will be denied. Nurseries with existing inventories of cogongrass, including Red Baron or Japanese blood grass cultivars, must sell or remove all plants from nurseries or garden centers by Oct. 31.

Any remaining plant material will be subject to a stop-sale order and will be destroyed, or must be shipped to other states in compliance with U.S. Department of Agriculture, Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service regulations.

Cogongrass was accidentally introduced into Alabama around 1911 as seed in packing materials from Japan, and purposefully introduced for forage uses.

Anyone with questions can contact Rick Iverson, an NCDA&CS weed specialist, at (919) 733-3931, ext. 246.

The N.C. Department of Agriculture and Consumer Services encourages livestock producers to register their farms with the NCFarmID program. NCFarmID is a voluntary program to register farms for a national identification number as a way to protect livestock in the event of a disease outbreak. For more, contact NCDA&CS at (919) 715-2951 or go to www.NCFarmID.com.

The 15th annual Southeastern Animal Fiber Fair will be held Oct. 24-26 at the WNC Agricultural Center in Fletcher. Hours are 9 a.m. to 6 p.m., Oct. 24 and 25, and 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Oct. 26. The event features fiber animals, workshops, demonstrations and vendors. Cost is $3. For more, contact Teri Gabic, (864) 468-4220 or Shirley Thobe, (828) 337-9032.

The annual Carolina Green Living Expo will be held Nov. 21-23 in Concord. The free event will cover many aspects of agriculture from biofuels to sustainable farming, and will include a number of educational seminars. The hours are 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Nov. 21 & 22, and 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. on Nov. 23. Organizers are still seeking vendors. Call (910) 795-0292 or go to www.carolinalivegreenexpo.com for more.

Family pioneers use of plasticulture for vegetables in Stokes County

PINNACLE – This year, Ricky Fulk and his family planted 32 acres of vegetables on black plastic with drip irrigation. That might not sound unusual until you realize that they live in the rocky, rolling foothills of North Carolina, in the shadow of Pilot Mountain — not in the coastal plain.

Curious travelers along old U.S. Highway 52 have been known to pull over and ask questions about the plastic-covered rows. The fields even grab the attention of locals, who are more accustomed to seeing rows of tobacco.

Some of the land Fulk farms had been in tobacco since 1746, and he had grown it himself for the last 20 years. Now, tobacco is history. He has no regrets.

“We have not missed tobacco at all this year,” said Fulk. “We were not making any money. Now the whole family is involved in produce, and we’re all loving it.”

In 2004, when Fulk was deciding to transition to produce, he discussed his plan with regional agronomist Robin Watson of the N.C. Department of Agriculture and Consumer Services. Watson was familiar with vegetable production on black plastic in the eastern part of the state and suggested that Fulk give it a try in Stokes County.

and soil types, the research replicates the varied growing conditions of different areas – offering assurances that the practical application of the research findings will work for growers. Again, this is invaluable to farmers who already have plenty of other variables to deal with each growing season.

I hope growers and members of the communities where research stations are located have had an opportunity to attend some of the events and programs offered throughout the year. There are still a number of events planned for the fall and I hope you will be able to attend those.

On Aug. 6 at the Peanut Belt Research Station in Lewiston-Woodville there is a class on peanut, cotton and tobacco. The next day, the Mountain Horticultural Crops Research Station in Fletcher will hold its Tomato and Vegetable Crop Field Day. On Aug. 14, I am proud that the Mountain Research Station in Waynesville will host its 100th Anniversary Celebration – an accomplishment that pays tribute to the longstanding support of ag research in the state. On Aug. 28, the Cherry Research Farm in Goldsboro will hold a Pasture Establishment, Design and Management Workshop. These are just a few of the up-

Fulk wasn’t sold on the idea at first. No one else locally had ever done it. He wasn’t sure how feasible it would be on clay soils, or whether it would be worth the extra time and investment. He cautiously decided to experiment with half an acre of cucumbers.

Watson guided Fulk through the new venture. He stressed the importance of pre-plant testing to measure levels of soil nutrients and to check for the presence of plant-parasitic nematodes. He explained the set-up of the drip system and the timing of watering and nucoming workshops and programs hosted by the research stations. A list of upcoming events is included at the right of this column. For a complete list of events through year end, go to www.ncagr.com/research/FieldDays.htm.

We are blessed, both as consumers and as growers, that the state has invested in agricultural research through the years. It is an investment that has paid, and will continue to pay, big returns to the state.

Agricultural revenue has provided the foundation for our state’s development and growth, and agriculture remains our leading industry. As the nation and world shift focus to developing renewable, sustainable energy, I believe agriculture will remain the state’s leading industry. North Carolina has the capability, the research know-how and the natural resources to figure prominently in our country’s goal of greater energy independence. I am encouraged and excited by the prospects.

Just as rising costs are affecting families and farmers, they are also impacting the research stations themselves. These added costs are just part of what I, and the deans and leadership of the agricultural programs at N.C. State University and N.C. A&T State University – parttrient application. He demonstrated how to use tissue tests to adjust fertilizer input precisely throughout the season.

“Growing crops on black plastic and fertilizing through drip irrigation give a grower more control than he ordinarily would have,” said Watson. “Water and nutrient application can be easily regulated throughout the season. Disease problems are fewer, and harvest is generally cleaner. There’s more precision and less worry.”

Fulk is now an ardent proponent of plasticulture, and his enthusiasm for it is spreading.

ners in the 18 research stations – will talk about as part of long-term strategic planning for the research stations program.

I met recently with Dr. Johnny Wynne, dean of NCSU’s College of Agriculture and Life Sciences, Dr. Donald R. McDowell, interim dean of the School of Agriculture and Environmental Sciences at N.C. A&T, and Dr. Ray McKinnie, N.C. A&T associate dean of extension, to talk about the future of our research stations and how we can make them even better so they continue to serve agriculture’s needs.

Through the years, North Carolina agriculture has proven its ability to adapt to changing markets, emerging pests and diseases and global competition. It has met these and other challenges head-on and with an eye towards the future.

In the same way, I believe Deans Wynne and McDowell and I are determined that these stations continue to provide the research foundation to support North Carolina’s agricultural needs for generations to come.

These 18 stations represent the agricultural legacy and sacrifices of those who came before us, and we must do everything we can to preserve, protect and enhance these resources for those who will follow.

“By the end of that first season, I could see that Robin was right,” he said. “Yield was at least twice what it would have been in bare ground, and the quality was good.”

Fulk has steadily increased his acres in production as well as the variety of crops. His repertoire now includes bell peppers, broccoli, cantaloupes, carrots, corn, cucumbers, squash, sweet potatoes, tomatoes and watermelon. About 90 percent of his produce is contracted to a Virginia company. The rest he markets close to home.

Since Fulk grows high-value crops with unique nutritional requirements, he knows the importance of fertilizing precisely, especially this year as costs continue to rise. Following Watson’s advice, he collects plant tissue samples at regular intervals throughout the season and submits them for nutrient analysis. Based on the test results, he knows exactly how to adjust his fertilizer input.

“Tissue testing is a necessity,” Fulk said. “With tobacco, you could shut your eyes and know what you were going to do every year, but it’s not that way with vegetables. But once you get the chemistry right, you can produce, produce, produce.”

Fulk depends on the NCDACS Agronomic Division laboratory in Raleigh to help him get the chemistry right. Laboratory analysis requires two to three days for plant and solution samples. Soil samples require at least a week and nematode samples at least two weeks. Turn-around times can be longer at certain times of year. Lab results are posted online for easy access.

Fees for analysis of most agronomic samples are minimal. Soil testing continues to be offered free of charge for North Carolina residents. “Tests are well worth the investment because they help growers optimize their use of expensive inputs,” said Agriculture Commissioner Steve Troxler.

Details on fees and sample submission are available online at www.ncagr.com/agronomi/sampleinfo.htm.

North Carolina growers have the added advantage of being able to consult with a regional agronomist about how to implement tissue-report findings. Thirteen regional agronomists visit growers, evaluate suspected nutrient problems, help take samples, give advice on liming and fertilization, and help identify and manage nematode problems. A listing of agronomists is available online at www.ncagr.com/agronomi/rahome.htm.

NCDA&CS honored for work on 2007 food recall

The N.C. Department of Agriculture and Consumer Services was recently recognized by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration for its work last year to remove potentially harmful food from shelves in the state.

The department received a Special Citation from FDA Commissioner Andrew von Eschenbach during the federal agency's annual Honor Awards Ceremony in Washington, D.C.

"We are thrilled to have our work to protect North Carolinians recognized by the FDA," Agriculture Commissioner Steve Troxler said. "We share this award with our other state and local health agencies who worked hard on the Castleberry's recall. We appreciate their efforts. Food safety is truly a collaborative that involves many agencies and individuals, and this award would not have been possible without teamwork."

Last summer, Georgia-based Castleberry's Food Co. recalled 90 products because of possible contamination with a toxin that causes botulism. The products included 27 brands of chili, beef stew, corned beef hash and flavors of canned dog food.

Concerned that the products weren't being removed from sale quickly enough, NCDA&CS inspectors, along with other state and local health authorities, conducted a blitz to check shelves at locations across the state. In 15 days, they visited 1,600 locations and removed 35,000 cans of product.

"FDA salutes the efforts of the N.C. Department of Agriculture and Consumer Services during the 2007 recall of certain canned products," von Eschenbach said.

"NCDA&CS employees helped prevent poisonings – and even deaths – by working quickly and effectively to discover and remove recalled products not only from retail locations, but also from daycare centers, summer camps and elder care facilities. As a result, there were no reports of illness as a result of ingesting recalled products in the state. Because of our strong collaborative working relationships with key partners like NCDA&CS, our ability to protect the American public from food borne illness is strengthened. We are very grateful for their contribution, and delighted to honor NCDA&CS with this citation."

The department was nominated for the award by FDA's Office of Regulatory Affairs recognizing its prompt, organized and effective response to protect citizens of North Carolina and collaboration with FDA.

Recipes

Peaches are now in season and here are a couple of tasty recipes for using this delicious fruit.

Peach Ice Cream

- 3 cups peach pulp
- ice and ice cream salt
- 2 quarts milk
- 1 tablespoon lemon juice
- 1/4 teaspoon salt
- 1 pint whipping cream, partially whipped
- 2 cups sugar
- 1/4 teaspoon almond flavoring
- 4 eggs, slightly beaten

To the peach pulp add the lemon juice and 1 cup of the sugar--let stand 1 hour. Add the other cup of sugar and salt to the beaten eggs, then blend in half of the milk. Cook this sugar, egg, and milk mixture over boiling water to make a thick custard. Cool. Add the remainder of milk, the whipping cream, almond flavoring, and sweetened peach pulp. Freeze using 1 part salt to 6 parts ice. Makes 1 gallon.

Fresh Peach Tarts

- 4 cups sliced fresh peaches
- 3/4 cup sugar
- 2 teaspoons fresh lemon juice
- 1 tablespoon cornstarch
- 4 baked 5-inch tart shells

Combine peaches, sugar and lemon juice in bowl; mix well. Let stand for 20 minutes. Drain, reserving juice. Add enough water to reserved juice to measure 1 cup. Pour juice into saucepan. Stir in cornstarch gradually. Cook until transparent, stirring constantly. Cool. Spoon peaches into tart shells. Pour juice syrup over peaches. Chill until glaze is set. Garnish with clusters of dark grapes. Yield: 4 tarts.

Peachy Delight

- 1 (2-layer) package yellow cake mix
- 3/4 cup melted butter
- 1 pound peaches, sliced, sweetened
- 2 cups sour cream
- 1/4 cup sugar
- 3 egg yolks
- Cinnamon to taste

Combine cake mix and butter in bowl; mix well. Spread in bottom of lightly greased 9 x 12-inch cake pan. Layer peaches over top. Blend sour cream, sugar and egg yolks in bowl. Spoon over peaches. Sprinkle with cinnamon. Bake at 350 degrees for 30-35 minutes or until set. Yield: 12 servings.

Low-Fat Peach Poundcake

- Vegetable cooking spray
- 1/3 cup vegetable oil
 - 1/2 cup plain lowfat yogurt
 - 1 1/2 cups sugar, divided
 - 3 eggs
 - 2 egg whites
 - 1 teaspoon vanilla
 - 3 cups flour, divided
 - 1 1/2 teaspoons baking powder
 - 1/2 teaspoon salt
 - 2 cups chopped, fresh peaches

Spray a 10-inch tube pan with cooking spray. Sprinkle with 1 teaspoon sugar. Combine oil and yogurt, gradually add remaining sugar, beating well. Add whole eggs and whites, one at a time, beating well after each addition. Add vanilla and mix well. Combine 2 3/4 cups flour, baking powder and salt. Gradually add to yogurt mixture; beat until well-blended. Dredge peaches with remaining 1/4 cup flour. Fold peaches into batter. Pour batter into prepared pan. Bake at 350°F for 1 hour 10 minutes. Remove from pan and cool completely. Serves 16.

N.C. State Fair Premium Book available

Online registration offered for the first time

North Carolinians with skills ranging from creating house furnishings and flower gardens to raising champion livestock often seek the coveted blue ribbon at the N.C. State Fair. As with any competition, the start of their blue ribbon quest begins with the State Fair Premium Book.

The Premium Book provides detailed information regarding State Fair competitions, including rules and regulations, entry deadlines, premiums, and judging criteria.

The 2008 State Fair Premium Book is now available online at www.ncstatefair.org. Copies are also available by calling (919) 821-7400, ext. 4529.

New to the 2008 competition lineup is the Fine Dining table decorating contest. Exhibitors will be able to showcase their decorating talent and artistic concepts while conforming to a specific theme and correctly setting a table. Entry forms for this category will be accepted Monday, Aug. 11, though Monday, Aug. 25, only. Only 10 tables will be available for the competition, on a first-come first-served basis. For more about this contest, view the 2008 Premium Book online.

Rules for entering everything from canned goods to livestock can be found in the State Fair Premium Book. The premium book can be found online at www.ncstatefair.org.

In addition to creating new contests, the State Fair has made competition registration easier by accepting online entries, beginning July 14. Entries for the following categories will be accepted online this year: Forage, Flower & Garden, Horticulture, Arts & Photography, Bees & Honey, 4-H, Culinary, Clothing, Home Furnishings, Handicrafts & Hobbies, Poultry, and Rabbits. Online registrations will be uploaded directly to the State Fair Entry Department. Exhibitors can add or delete entries until the deadline with no additional fees. Registration for these categories ends Wednesday, Sept. 24. Entry fees, where applicable, can be paid online, with no transaction fees.

Competitions are open to the public, and a completed entry form must be submitted to the N.C. State Fair Entry Department. All entry forms and online registrations must be submitted on the deadline by 5 p.m.

Commissioner Troxler hosting food safety event Aug. 19

Several hundred representatives of the agriculture and food industries are expected to attend the fourth annual AgFIRST! symposium Aug. 19 at the State Fairgrounds in Raleigh.

The theme of the event is “Providing Safe Food for Healthy Families in a Global Economy.” It will take place from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. in the Kerr Scott Building. Admission is free, and lunch will be provided.

Scheduled speakers include Agriculture Commissioner Steve Troxler; Dr. David Acheson, assistant commissioner of the U.S. Food and Drug Administration; Sean Kennedy, director of the Center for Food Safety and Defense, plus executives from the food processing and retail industries.

Acheson will discuss the national strategy to safeguard food, and Kennedy will provide insight into the powerful economic impact of consumer confidence in the food supply. Other topics will include North Carolina’s Farm to School Program, efforts to keep N.C. produce safe, food recall initiatives and responding to foreign animal diseases.

Also scheduled to speak are members of North Carolina’s congressional delegation, including Sens. Elizabeth Dole and Richard Burr, and Reps. Walter Jones and Brad Miller.

tional strategy to safeguard food, and Kennedy will provide insight into the powerful economic impact of consumer confidence in the food supply. Other topics will include North Carolina’s Farm to School Program, efforts to keep N.C. produce safe, food recall initiatives and responding to foreign animal diseases.

Also scheduled to speak are members of North Carolina’s congressional delegation, including Sens. Elizabeth Dole and Richard Burr, and Reps. Walter Jones and Brad Miller.

“The N.C. Department of Agriculture and Consumer Services is committed to building the nation’s strongest food safety program,” Troxler said. “North Carolina’s economy depends on agribusiness, and the nation depends on North Carolina for safe food.”

The FDA’s months-long national investigation to find the source of an outbreak of salmonella illnesses across the country highlights the importance of maintaining a safe food supply, Troxler said. “That’s why we’re bringing industry and government together. We all must work together to ensure that America’s food supply is as safe as possible,” he said.

Troxler launched the AgFIRST! event in 2005, and it has grown every year, with nearly 200 people attending in 2007, said Joe Reardon, director of the NCDA&CS Food and Drug Protection Division. “AgFIRST! has become a very popular event, we felt like we would need a bigger venue this year, so we moved over to the Scott Building,” Reardon said.

NCDA&CS urges owners to have equine vaccinated for EEE and West Nile Virus

Frequent periods of wet weather over the past few months could make for a potentially dangerous summer and fall for North Carolina equine. The weather, coupled with a mild winter, means the state could experience a heavier-than-normal mosquito season, which increases the risk of mosquito-borne diseases in horses and donkeys, including diseases that mosquitoes can spread to humans.

“The best way to protect both humans and animals is to reduce the breeding grounds for mosquitoes and reduce exposure,” said Agriculture Commissioner Steve Troxler. “Equine owners can also vaccinate their animals against two diseases that are now endemic in North Carolina – West Nile virus and Eastern Equine Encephalomyelitis.”

Horse owners should talk with their veterinarians to immediately start the vaccination protocol. Both vaccinations initially require two shots, 30 days apart, for horses that have no prior vaccination history. Neither vaccination fully protects the animal until several weeks after the second shot, so it is important to vaccinate as early in the mosquito season as possible. State Veterinarian Dr. David Marshall recommends a booster shot of each vaccine be given every six months in Eastern North Carolina because of the extended active mosquito season.

Equine owners still have time to vaccinate animals against EEE and West Nile Virus.

North Carolina has had no reported cases of EEE or WNV in the past two years, but other Southern states are seeing cases this year. In Florida, there have been 45 reported cases of EEE in horses, and all have been fatal. There have also been eight reported cases in Georgia.

State officials think a number of factors contributed to a two-year decline in the number of cases in North Carolina, including an increased number of vaccinations, increased natural immunity among healthy horses and favorable weather conditions. However, Marshall cautions equine owners against letting their guard down based on a decline in cases the past few years, especially considering the cases in Florida and Georgia this year.

“The best way to prevent these possibly fatal diseases is to vaccinate horses against them. The cost of prevention easily outweighs the cost of treating a sick animal,” Marshall said. “I encourage horse owners to continue to take measures to protect their animals despite the perception that the threat may have lessened.”

Symptoms of WNV in horses can include loss of appetite and depression, fever, weakness or paralysis of hind limbs, convulsions, impaired vision or hyperexcitability.

Symptoms of EEE, also known as “equine sleeping sickness,” include impaired vision, aimless wandering, head pressing, circling, inability to swallow, irregular staggering gait, paralysis, convulsions and death.

People, horses and birds can become infected from a bite by a mosquito carrying the diseases, but there is no evidence horses can transmit the virus to other horses, birds or people through contact.

Mosquitoes can breed in any puddle that lasts for more than four days, so removing any source of standing water can reduce the chance of exposing animals to WNV or EEE.

Keeping horses in stalls at night, using insect screens and fans and turning off lights after dusk can also help reduce exposure to mosquitoes. Insect repellants can be effective if used according to manufacturers’ instructions.

For more on WNV or EEE, go to www.ncagr.com/vet/DiseaseAlerts.htm.

NCDA&CS declares external quarantine for Sirex wood wasp

North Carolina has established an external quarantine for the European wood wasp Sirex noctilio for the states of New York, Pennsylvania, Michigan and Vermont.

This external quarantine is needed to prevent the potential spread of the European wood wasp into North Carolina.

The quarantine also will apply to other states found to be infested with European wood wasp. No federal quarantine for this wood wasp is currently in place.

“The quarantine means that certain trees, nursery stock and wood products from these four states must be inspected and accompanied by a certificate or permit from the state of origin if they are moved into North Carolina,” said Agriculture Commissioner Steve Troxler.

The quarantine affects the following articles:

- Pine wood packaging materials, pine pallets and loose wood packing material made of pine, and non-manufactured pine wood articles used in the repair and re-manufacture of wood packaging material;
- Pine nursery stock with trunks 4 inches or larger in diameter, measured at the soil line;
- Dug, balled and burlapped pine Christmas trees with trunks 4 inches or larger in diameter, as measured at the soil line;

- Cut pine Christmas trees collected from the wild or taken from an established landscape planting;
- Pine firewood;
- Any of the following pine items with components greater than 1 inch in thickness in any two dimensions: wood shavings, wood chips, mulch, wood millings and fines, wood pellet components, wood residue, wood scraps, wood slabs and wood waste;
- Pine logs, log-home components, kit homes, lumber, log furniture, decorative items, sawn wood, round wood, non-manufactured wood products;
- Pine pulpwood with components greater than 1 inch in thickness in any two dimensions;
- Any other products or articles that are determined by an inspector to present a hazard of spreading this wood wasp.

Sirex is considered a secondary pest in its native range of Europe, Asia and northern Africa, but it has the potential to cause a significant loss of pine trees in areas where it is introduced and not controlled by native predators and parasites.

Turn-around time is optimal for soil (and nematode!) samples submitted in August

The Agronomic Division’s soil testing lab is processing samples quickly now but will be increasingly busy in the fall as farmers begin harvesting. Homeowners, golf course superintendents, landscapers and others with flexible schedules are urged to submit their samples as soon as possible. Due to the continuing drought, many cool-season lawn grasses and pastures will need to be reseeded. Sampling now will enable the application of lime well in advance of September or October planting.

While collecting soil samples, be sure to look for areas of poor growth that may be due to plant-parasitic nematodes. If you suspect a problem, go ahead and collect soil for nematode assay so you can plan a management strategy for next season.
